Attorney Cynthia Stamer Shares Best Practices for Protecting Plan Participant & Other Employee Information At SBWA/IRS Plan Administrator Skills Workshops

Dallas, TX – January 23, 2011: Attorney Cynthia Stamer will share key legal risks and best practices for handling participant health and other personal information with employee benefit and human resources leaders and consultants at the Southwest Benefits Association (SWBA)/Internal Revenue Service (IRS) Plan Administrator Skills Workshops to be held February 11 in Oklahoma City, February 25 in Dallas, and March 4 in Houston. Register or review the full agenda for the Workshops here.

“Employee benefits and other human resources departments, their vendors and consultants are entrusted with a broad range of sensitive health care and other personal information about employees, their dependents and beneficiaries,” said Stamer, a Board Certified Labor & Employment Lawyer who Chairs the American Bar Association RPTe Employee Benefits & Other Compensation Arrangements Group. “Widespread publicity about laws and identity theft or other abusive uses of employee and other data have boosted concerns of American workers and regulators about how employee personal information is used and protected. Consequently, appropriately managing and safeguarding this information is critical to manage legal liability and preserve employee trust essential to the value of the programs.”

Stamer, a noted Texas-based employee benefits and employment lawyer has more than 23 years experience counseling and representing employers and other employee benefit plan sponsors, plan administrators and fiduciaries, insurers and financial services providers, third party administrators, human resources and employee benefit information technology vendors and others privacy and data security, fiduciary responsibility, plan design and administration and other compliance, risk management and operations matters. Board Certified in Labor & Employment Law and author of hundreds of publications and workshops on human resources and employee benefit matters, Stamer serves in leadership roles of employee benefits, human resources, health care and other Sections of the American Bar Association and many other organizations. Ms. Stamer works, publishes and speaks extensively on privacy and data security and other human resources, employee benefits, compensation, internal controls and related matters. She also is recognized for her publications, industry leadership, workshops and presentations on these and other human resources concerns and regularly speaks and conducts training on these matters.
