Demonstration #1

In preparation for a surge in hiring, Bobby Baker, Director of Human Resources for Project Management, Inc., a national construction project management firm, is conducting an internal I-9 audit and uses the opportunity to train a new HR Generalist. During the audit, Bobby notices that a couple of previously completed I-9s have missing information. The HR Generalist has too many questions and is slowing Bobby's progress on the audit. Since Bobby personally completed two of the deficient I-9 forms, Bobby fills in the missing information during the audit. Will Bobby complete the audit and train the HR Generalist quickly enough to be ready for the new hires they expect as a result of the job fair they held at the convention center?

Demonstration #2

Ryan Redding, Human Resource Generalist with Project Management, Inc., has 40 no-match letters from the Social Security Administration sitting on her desk. Ryan's supervisor, Bobby Baker, is in the middle of an internal I-9 audit and has not received Ryan's messages asking for guidance. Ryan is pretty sure SSA is telling her she has to fire 40 employees, but she decides to meet with Project Management's immigration counsel before handing out any pink slips.

Demonstration #3

Bobby is very worried about the 89 employees arrested at Project Management, Inc., but what he can't believe is the amount of documentation taken by ICE yesterday! The warrant they left behind lists I-9s, payroll documents, and copies of identification documents for all employees ever hired by Project Management, Inc., not to mention vehicle titles, employment applications, immigration documents, scanners and printers. And why did they take their biometrics scanner used for making employee I.D. badges? What is even more incredible was that Sheriff Jamie Joel, whom Bobby has known forever since the sheriff lives down the street, personally assisted in the raid. There must have been at least 30 law enforcement vehicles in their parking lot! Bobby and company president, Page Parker, head straight to the offices of Arnt Wie Goode, LLP, the company's law firm, to speak with partners Amy Arnt and Wendy Wie. Hopefully, they won't need to see, Gary Goode, their criminal law specialist.

Demonstration #4

Page Parker and Bobby Baker are advised to consider a plea bargain. Did they really know their employees were unauthorized to work? How could they? The thought of going to trial and facing years in prison seems insane, so they visit with Arnt Wie Goode, LLP to weigh their options.

Demonstration #5

Knowing the company can no longer help the arrested employees, Ryan Redding refers family members of the detained employees to local immigration practitioners to help them with their deportation cases. Can the employees get a fair hearing in court after the company's negotiations? Because this was bigger than each individual client, local immigration attorneys come together to discuss possible strategies in defending detained immigrants.

Demonstration #6
After finally bonding out of detention, employee Dolores Daily prepares for her court hearing where the immigration judge will decide on her application to adjust her status to permanent residence. She knows she is not a bad person, but wonders what the judge will think of those terrible things the ICE agents accused her of doing. She is not a thief. Dolores used the card she bought at the flea market to work and pay for her children's education.
